

20 th September 2009

We communicate in huge sorrow the early passing of John Simango, the coordinator of the "Watoto" project of Kisedet.

John left us in the morning (probably following a stroke) with a smile on his lips, the way he always used to do.

Nino had nicknamed him "Albertone", because, just like Alberto Sordi, he had a sound laugh, and not even death took his smile away.

I do not usually like seeing beloved people when they are dead, as I like to remember them the way they used to be when living, but with John it has been different. I will always remember him this way: lying down as if he was asleep and, I swear, with a smile on his lips!!

Nice journey to you John, and may God welcome you.
You will be probably laughing on us, who are weeping for you.

Kwaheri John, tutaonana (Goodbye John, see you)
